1. Course Description

1.1 Context

Course overview:

This course is an elective course. It introduces basic theory and empirical findings on political economics and economic development. The course will also present several papers related to the Chinese economy, particularly about China's economic growth and its efficiency. As a miracle economy, China has witnessed a very fast GDP growth (around 10% annually) in the last three decades, after it transitioned to a market economy and started to open internationally. Several sources of the engines of the Chinese economy, such as the regional government competition, the massive physical and human capital accumulation, TFP growth, and increases in innovative activities, will be discussed in the class.

Prerequisites:

Mankiw, Gregory "Principle of Macroeconomics" 5th Edition

Advanced Macroeconomics (at least know development accounting)

1.2 Textbooks and Reading Materials

2.3 Assessment/Grading Details

Class Participation (10%): We will have some group discussions. Please put your name and student ID when submitting. The score ranges from 7-10 on a 1-10 scale, most of the time. Your scores will be curved that more weights will be put on higher scores. If someone does not show up, but his/her name appears on the sheet, the whole group will at most get a D for this course.

One presentation (40%): each student will have one 30-minute presentation. Depending on the total amount of students, the presentation can be done by one person or jointly by several students. I will give a list of papers that can be chosen from for presentations. The schedule will be announced in class.

Referee report (50%): each student needs to write a referee report for a paper. I will give a list of papers that can be chosen from for referee reports. Referee reports shall be no longer than 5 pages. The deadline will be announced in class.

Class discipline - read carefully. Violating each will deduct totally score by 5 points.
1, entry and exits within class time should be quiet and non-distracting.

2.4 Academic Honesty and Plagiarism

It is important for a student's effort and credit to be recognized through class assessment. Credits earned for a student work due to efforts done by others are clearly unfair. Deliberate dishonesty is considered academic misconducts, which include plagiarism; cheating on assignments or examinations; engaging in unauthorized collaboration on academic work; taking, acquiring, or using test materials without faculty permission; submitting false or incomplete records of academic achievement; acting alone or in cooperation with another to falsify records or to obtain dishonestly grades, honors, awards, or professional endorsement; or altering, forging, or misusing a University academic record; or fabricating or falsifying of data, research procedures, or data analysis.

All assessments are subject to academic misconduct check. Misconduct check may include reproducing the assessment, providing a copy to another member of faculty, and/or communicate a copy of this assignment to the PHBS Discipline Committee. A suspected plagiarized document/assignment submitted to a plagiarism checking service may be kept in its database for future reference purpose.

Where violation is suspected, penalties will be implemented. The penalties for academic misconduct may include: deduction of honour points, a mark of zero on the assessment, a fail grade for the whole course, and reference of the matter to the Peking University Registrar.

For more information of plagiarism, please refer to PHBS Student Handbook.
